

Dietitians Australia pays tribute to late Peter Williams – Dietitian Nutritionist OAM – Media release

Rarely do pioneers of the dietetics profession leave such a legacy as that of the late Peter Williams OAM, who passed at 71 years of age last week.

President of Dietitians Australia, Tara Diversi paid tribute to Peter who was highly published in the field of dietetics and nutrition, and a mentor to many.

“Peter was published 282 times, and listed 56 professional activities to his career,” Tara said.

“He truly has left his mark on the health and wellbeing of Australians and paved the way for dietitians into the future.”

It was Peter’s passion for working with people – and food – that led him to a career in dietetics where he emerged in food service at Royal Prince Alfred Hospital.

He would later be approached by Kellogg Australia to take on the position of Director for Scientific and Consumer Affairs where Peter introduced folate to fortification in the cereal, as well as salt reduction.

Peter's departure from Kellogg Australia in 2000 to take a position at the University of Wollongong coincided with his presidency of the Dietitians Association of Australia (DAA), now known as Dietitians Australia.

"In the three years that Peter was President, he built an emphasis on evidence-based practice, and introduced measures to strengthen member connections," Tara said.

"He was a tireless advocate for our organisation, and his work helped shape the landscape of dietetics in Australia."

In 2010 Peter was made 'Honorary Life Member' of DAA, and in 2020 received the Order of Australia Medal for services to community health and medical education. This was also the year he published his memoir My Divided Life, a fascinating insight into his personal and professional life.

"In reply to his Concluding Thoughts in the memoir, Peter certainly was a grateful and humble person, who lived an ethical life that helped others."

Dietitians Australia offers its most sincere condolences to Peter's husband, daughters, family and friends.
